1. MODULE DESCRIPTION

This subject provides a general overview of the changes which have taken place in the English linguistic system from its beginnings until our present day, as evidenced in written texts. Students will acquire specific knowledge and skills helpful to understand how linguistic structures and uses of English have evolved in time; to discover how current linguistic methodology is applied to the description of language change; to gain access to non-edited versions of historical texts; and to present exceptions as past regularities of the English linguistic system in the EFL classes.

COURSE SUMMARY

History of the English language is a compulsory 6 ECTS course included in the first semester - third year of the Degree in English Studies. The subject provides a general overview of the changes which have taken place in the English linguistic system from its beginnings until our present day, as evidenced in written texts. The main concepts covered are the following: Historical linguistics and other related disciplines, the configuration of Old English as a mixture of the languages spoken by the first settlers in Britain; the shift of English from a synthetic to an analytic language. Other aspects are the rising of a standard in Middle English and how it evolved into Present Day English at all levels of linguistic analysis. This subject will help students to understand exceptions as well as regularities of the English linguistic system. This knowledge can be applied to their own learning of English or to the teaching of English as a Foreign Language.

Prerequisites:

Since all activities are conducted in English, the module assumes a good working knowledge of English (Common European Framework level B2.2 or above).

2. AIMS

Generic Competences:

1. To use web-based and other bibliographical sources to find reliable information.
2. To present information, analysis and conclusions in a convincing manner.
3. To develop the skills of analysis, argumentation, inference and abstract thinking.
4. To develop the student's own autonomy as learners.
5. To develop a scientific knowledge of English through time.

Subject specific competences:

1. To show command of the main concepts and terminology related to the History of the English Language.
2. To be able to understand how the language system worked in the previous periods of the language.
3. To be able to produce descriptions of the grammatical system in Old, Middle and Modern English.
4. To be able to infer rules (phonographic, morphological or syntactical) from a set of examples.
5. To be able to read and translate texts belonging to different stages of the history of English.

Autonomous work	Readings. Connection to Blackboard to complete assignments and activities on History of the English Language; preparation of activities, essays and exam.

5. ASSESSMENT

Assessment criteria:

Evaluation will measure students' knowledge of the history of the English language as well as their ability to self-direct their studies, and their awareness of the processes involved in the changing nature of a language. Therefore, the following criteria will be taken into account:

- Ability to plan and monitor one's learning.
- Ability to present information in a clear and coherent manner.
- Understanding of the former linguistic stages of English.
- Ability to infer rules related to the phonographic, morphological and syntactical planes of the language.
- Lexical range and appropriateness of lexis used.
- Ability to understand a variety of texts belonging to different periods of the history of English.

Assessment will be based on these criteria:

- Class attendance and participation with coherent and valuable contributions.
- Acquisition, understanding and application of concepts, together with originality of ideas in assigned tasks and in the written exam.

Assessment procedures:

Assessment will be continuous, so regular work, participation in class and attendance will be compulsory (a minimum of 80% is required for the face to face sessions and 100% for the workshops). The practical part is worth 60%, distributed as explained below. There will be a final exam with questions on the theoretical contents, which will be worth 40% of the final mark. Students should have acquired the desirable level in each of the competences specified in this syllabus.

All the activities should be completed in the way they are required (electronic, printed or both) and in due time. The activities are analysis and translation of texts, as well as different exercises (fill in the gaps, matching and multiple-choice quizzes) on Blackboard and other types of exercises and readings to be corrected in class. Students, who do not pass the subject in January, will have the chance to re-sit a complete final exam in June. The exam will be structured in the same way as the final ordinary exam.

For those students who have requested exemption due to special circumstances from the continuous assessment process and have been thus authorized by the Dean of the Faculty, there will be one final summative exam (100% of the mark) over the material covered in the course. The exam will consist of two parts: questions about the theoretical contents (40 %) and practical exercises as well as texts to be translated and analysed in the practical part (60%). Students must obtain a score of 5/10 in each part.

Language performance (in grammar, lexis and spelling) will be taken into account for the final mark for all students. Thus, a good level of English will be required and assessed along the course through the oral participation in class, in the writing of essays or papers, and in the final exam, according to the standards established by the Department of Modern Philology.

Plagiarism will not be tolerated. Those students who commit plagiarism in any of the activities mentioned above will get a fail mark in the corresponding activity. Any plagiarism found in the final version of a paper will be penalised and could result in the failure of the subject.

Marking criteria:

- Outstanding (MH): Students display an outstanding grasp of the aims and contents of the module. All assessment criteria have been achieved at an exceptionally high level. Performance in all the tasks shows that students have read and thought at a level well beyond what is expected in the module. Students attend lectures and are always well-prepared for discussion in seminars. They obtain outstanding results in the exams.
- Excellent (SB): Students display an excellent grasp of the aims and contents of the module. All assessment criteria have been achieved at a very high standard and an exceptionally high level. Performance in all the tasks shows all or most of the appropriate characteristics expected for this type of work. Students attend lectures and are practically always well-prepared for discussion in seminars, with almost no absences. They obtain excellent results in the exams.
- Very Good (N): Students display a very good grasp of the aims and contents of the module. All assessment criteria have been met fully and many have been achieved at a good or very good standard. Performance in all the tasks shows a good knowledge of the syllabus contents. Students attend lectures and seminars, with few absences, and have done most of the preparation for them. They have a good foundation in the prescribed readings and build on ideas put forward in lectures and seminars. They obtain very good results in the exams.
- Satisfactory (A): Students show a satisfactory grasp of the aims and contents of the module. All assessment criteria have been met, but some barely exceed the threshold standard to pass the module. Performance in all the tasks shows some of the appropriate characteristics in relation to content, illustration, organisation and expression. Students are present in lectures and seminars, with few absences, and occasionally contribute to discussions. They obtain acceptable results in the exams.
- Fail (S): Students show an unsatisfactory grasp of the aims and contents of the module. Some assessment criteria do not reach the threshold standard to pass the module. Performance in all the tasks shows limited understanding of essential concepts and/or minimal research. Students have multiple absences and when they come, they are often not prepared or they do not say much. Their results in the exams are insufficient considering the requirements of the course.
